Slaying of Factory Girl South's Most Baffling Crime Mystery, Reviewed in Detail.

CHAPTER I

Will the veil of mystery be lifted when the curtain rises next Monday on another scene in Atlanta's darkest tragedy?

A vast audience, shocked by the horror of Mary Phagan's fate on a Saturday of last April and held through the succeeding weeks in the throes of the baffling crime drama, in keen suspense awaits this question's answer.

Will Fulton County's Solicitor General also to point his finger at Leo M. Frank and exclaim, "That is the man who strangled Mary Phagan?"

Shocking his damning accusation with such an abundance of evidence that there can remain no shadow of doubt? Or will Luther Rosser, certain to be lowering and masterful factor in the titanic struggle that is to be staged, unmask his strength, bring to bear the secret evidence that has dawned in his possession for weeks, and down every byway of suspicion that the State has created about its prisoner and, as a dramatic finale, assail the witness stand, with a raking volley of questions that will leave the negro man, abashed and terrified, a confirmation of the crime upon his lips?

Whole State stirred.

All of Atlanta—most of the State—has been in the throes of the most intense interest in the outcome.

Not one critic ever stirred Georgia in its depths as has the slaying of the little factory girl.

The murder of her has so gripped the hearts and aroused the sympathies of the people throughout the State, that Georgia's criminal history reveals no other case in which the public interest has remained as fevered through three months' trial, with other exciting events. From the time the streets first were filled with the brutal killing in the National Penitentiary until the present day, it has appeared to be a disquisition in the desire to learn each day's developments.

There was in the early days of the tragedy a cry for summary vengeance upon the murderer, but time has tempered this into a demand for justice, which in no case has determined in that it is not a determination as the first hot wave of indignation.

The Phagan case has retained in the public mind purity of course, because it has remained as baffling as ever encountered. With the people's solved its appealing interest gradually would have dimmed, but the mystery of the tragic features of the drama so far as it has progressed and a general feeling of mystery has been created in it supplies an explanation of why the fate of Mary Phagan has become a permanent in the people's hearts.

The revolving circumstances of the crime—the attack, the pitiful struggle of the hapless child in the hands of her assailant, the blow and, finally, the garrote—have become so etched in the memory.

But standing out from prominence then the remembrance of these abstract details are two of the principal features in the tragedy.

Leo M. Frank, charged by the State with her death, these two have made the appeal to the public imagination.

The contrast of their positions in life.

Mary Phagan was only a little factory girl whose happy and innocent laughter was stifled by one of the heaviest crimes in Atlanta's history.

Leo Frank, a brilliant young man of position and family, was accused of this deed of a brutal human guano.

Mary Phagan was a girl of 17 who was glad to get the 13 or 14 a week that her work at the little factory won for her.

Leo Frank's family had wealth. An uncle was a reputed millionnaire.

Mary Phagan had hardly the education to which her parents could give her. Times were not always easy in her family and she was driven to manage her schoolbooks and work in the factory.

Frank was a Cornell graduate. He had a high technical education. He had been sent abroad to select the machinery for the Atlanta plant. His business associates placed every confidence in him. His friends knew him for a upright and moral young man, with a most promising career ahead of him.

That he would descend to the level of crime of the worst type was inconceivable to them. The possibility of such a thing to thousands of others a subject for daily conjecture.

Life of Leo Frank.

Mary Phagan's life began 14 years ago in Marietta. She was the petted "baby" of the family. She had three older brothers and a sister, but she is remembered as having the prettiest features and attractive ways that made her greatly liked by her girl friends in the same time to work in Atlanta.

Life of Leo Frank.

Marietta she had one who was to play a brief but important part in the drama. It was J. Ganit. Within a few hours after her cold body was found in the gloomy basement of the National Penitentiary her child was being carried to the morgue as he lay in a car in Marietta, it was placed in the morgue and then to the place that he was being.

Life of Leo Frank.

At the happy conversation of young girlhood when the family moved to Atlanta, there here was a girl named the family in the death of Mary's father. Hardly followed money and it became necessary for little Mary to support the family.

Life of Leo Frank.

A year ago Mrs. Phagan married W. J. Coleman and they moved to No. 114 Lindsay street, Atlanta. Mary obtained work in the National Penitentiary and soon made friends with all the children about her home and with the mother of the little factory. Although she never had any contact with the mother of the child, she sometimes denied the children of sometimes in more pretentious circumstances.

Life of Leo Frank.

All Loved Little Mary.

To the loving and affectionate half-brother, the attractive and outgoing sweet disposition, in the few leisure hours he had he had been devoted to her home with the children of the neighborhood. He was the people of Bellwood on the outskirts of Atlanta.

Whether she had done the deed or not, she was a girl of 17 who was glad to get the 13 or 14 a week that her work at the little factory won for her.

started toward the factory. Some time between 12:10 and 12:15 Mary Phagan entered the doors of the National Penitentiary and went to the office of Leo Frank, where she drew her pay. She never was seen alive after that moment except by the nurse that attacked her, beat her cruelly and looted her pockets.

Leo made his regular rounds for several hours that night, shutting down all the windows and making his trip over the different floors, as was his custom.

He climbed down the ladder into the basement to see if everything was all right down there. He went no farther, however, than the boiler room which is at the bottom of the ladder. Peering through the darkness, he saw nothing out of the way.

That night was no different than any other night up until shortly before 3 o'clock in the morning. At this time he made another trip into the basement.

Did he hear some noise that led him to go down the ladder and venture beyond the dim flicker of light from the gas jet?

30 CONVICTS IN SEEK EVIDENCE AGAINST BANG OF ROBBERS

Fire Starts in Hay Under Sleeping Quarters on Mississippi Penal Farm.

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—Thirty convicts, sleeping on the second floor of a wooden cage at the Oakley convict farm 20 miles southwest of Jackson, were burned to death early this morning.

All of the victims were negroes and their bodies were burned beyond recognition. This afternoon their charred bodies were buried in the prison grave yard.

The fire started on the first floor at the stairway landing, cutting off the only avenue of escape. The structure was built ten years ago with lumber taken from the old penitentiary building in Jackson. It burned with astonishing rapidity.

The convict farm is not equipped with any form of fire protection. Two night watchmen are employed at the building, but the fire started in the flames burst through the windows of the lower floor.

The screams of the dying prisoners could be heard for nearly two miles. Prisoners in the vicinity hurried to the scene, but were unable to give any assistance. The lower floor of the cage was used as a store building.

"It made absolutely no difference whether he was in my favor. An to the negro's character and standing, it would make little difference to a fair-minded jury whether he were indicted."

Bacon Unopposed, Gets 29,529 Votes in Senate Election

A total of 35,658 votes were cast for Augustus C. Bacon for United States Senator in the special election held July 16.

No one opposed Senator Bacon, but the election was held under the new law requiring United States Senators to be elected by direct vote of the people.

The returns were canvassed before the House and Senate in a joint meeting Tuesday by a committee of the Senators and standing.

The senatorial committee was composed of Senators James Taylor, Oscar Turner and Bush. The House committee consisted of Representatives Miles, McCreary, Smith, McDermott and Culpepper.

Thomas Protested As Crawford Case Solicitor Pro-Tem

Reuben R. Arnold, one of the attorneys for Mrs. Mary Belle Crawford, under heavy ball on the charge of poisoning her husband, Joshua Crawford, filed a protest Tuesday against the appointment of Attorney Lewis Thomas as pro-temporary solicitor.

The protest was made by Judge W. D. Ellis because of the disqualification of Solicitor Thomas. Attorney Arnold based his objection on the ground that Thomas already had been one of the attorneys in the case and therefore also was disqualified.

Attorney James said Tuesday he would go before Thomas and seek to have him indicted for looting so that the extradition papers might be obtained. He said he also would urge the immediate indictment of Mrs. Crawford.

NOVEL QUESTION FOR SUFFRAGE DEBATE

Speakers to Determine Difference in Meaning of "Suffragette" and "Suffragist"

Woman suffrage in all its phases will be discussed Tuesday night in the Habersham Chapter, D. A. R., and in the last of a series of entertainments arranged by the chapter to aid in raising funds for the new building which will be erected in Peachtree street.

This will be an open discussion on the suffrage question, as one of the leading topics of the day, said Mrs. William Lawson Peel, outlining the plans. "It must not be thought for a moment, however, that the daughters of the American Revolution are taking part in this discussion as an organization or even as individuals."

For instance, our last entertainment was a Mother Goose affair, but it was not intended that the public suppose we were all gone. "Our next venture will be the presentation of a beautiful Indian legend, but it can not be inferred that we are Indians."

Mrs. Peel, who is vice president of the chapter, said that the public suppose we were all gone. "Our next venture will be the presentation of a beautiful Indian legend, but it can not be inferred that we are Indians."

DEMANDS INTERVENTION IN MEXICO

BILL GRANTS TADPOLE TO WILSON

Murray of Oklahoma Would Hasten Relief to Americans and Europeans in Mexico.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A sensational resolution demanding intervention in Mexico within 30 days unless peace be restored, and denouncing the Huerta regime as one of "brute force, incendiarism, rapine and murder," was introduced in the House today by Representative William H. Murray of Oklahoma, a Democrat.

The resolution provides that the President shall notify Mexico that the lives and property of American citizens and all foreigners sojourning in Mexico shall be respected. If disorder in the Mexican republic continues for another 30 days the resolution provides the President shall intervene "to establish peace and order and civil government, and take possession of all public property of the former Republic of Mexico and hold the same until every item of expense and all damages for the deprivation of liberty or the destruction of property of any American citizen or citizens of any other nation has been fully compensated out of the Mexican revenues."

Mr. Murray's resolution refers to President Huerta as "the usurping monarch" and the resolution declares that the United States is in duty bound to protect its own citizens in Mexico as well as the citizens of other nations. The refusal of this country to carry out the Monroe Doctrine, the resolution says, might justify foreign intervention.

Nina Formby Says She Will Testify Against Frank

DEMAND FOR INTERVENTION MADE IN HOUSE

COURT READY TO DRAW VENUE

Jury to Try Factory Head Likely To Be Completed by Wednesday Night.

Despite the reported repudiation of her sensational affidavit that Leo M. Frank had tried repeatedly on the night of the Mary Phagan murder to secure a room in which to bring a girl, Mrs. Nina Formby declared in Chattanooga Tuesday that she would be in Atlanta on July 28 to testify to her statements when trial of the pencil factory superintendent opens.

According to a dispatch from Chattanooga, where the woman has been for several weeks, Mrs. Formby denies having ever extracted from her original declarations which she made to the police, and further stated that she would repeat them on the witness stand.

The police have asserted that Mrs. Formby has been eliminated from the case.

Superior Judge John T. Pendleton presided Tuesday to draw the venire for the trial of Leo M. Frank. This venire will be called next Monday morning unless the weather is unusually warm.

The jury, in all probability, will be selected and served before Wednesday night, according to Judge Pendleton.

Attorney Reuben R. Arnold stated Tuesday morning that he probably would ask Judge Pendleton to draw the venire from the Grand Jury box, and that he felt confident he could cite enough law on the subject to sustain his point.

Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey stated that the procedure was altogether irregular, if not illegal, and that he would oppose such a move as strongly as he fought the attempt on the part of the Grand Jury to indict Jim Conley over his protest.

The attorneys on both sides will be notified by telephone when Judge Pendleton begins to draw the venire, and he will allow them to be heard.

Both sides are ready. All the witnesses who will be used are within the jurisdiction of the court and able to attend. The inability of any one of the more than 100 to be in court on the day the case is called would sustain a request for postponement.

Attorney Arnold stated that the picture of the Grand Jury to indict Conley had made little difference to the case because it had been built before any known move was made to draw the indictment.

BILL GRANTS WAR POWER TO WILSON

Murray of Oklahoma Would Hasten Relief to Americans and Europeans in Mexico.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—A sensational resolution demanding intervention in Mexico within 30 days unless peace be restored, and denouncing the Huerta regime as one of "brute force, incendiary, rapine and murder" was introduced in the House today by Representative William H. Murray, of Oklahoma, a Democrat.

The resolution provides that the President shall notify Mexico that peace must be restored and that the lives and property of American citizens and all foreignersjourning to Mexico shall be respected.

If disorder in the Mexican republic should intervene within 30 days the resolution provides the President shall intervene, establish peace and order and civil government, and take possession of all public property of the former republic of Mexico and hold the same until every item of expense and all damages for the deprivation of liberty or the destruction of property of any American citizen or citizens of any other nation has been fully compensated out of the Mexican revenues.

It is also demanded that in the event of intervention the President be empowered to rehabilitate the Mexican Government, prepare the Mexican people for self-government and restore law and order, and the President is authorized to use the land and naval forces of the United States for the accomplishment of all such purposes.

The preamble of the resolution declares the Monroe Doctrine and asserts that the United States is in duty bound to protect the lives and property of its citizens in Mexico as well as the citizens of other nations. The refusal of this country to carry out the Monroe Doctrine, the resolution says, might justify foreign intervention.

Mr. Murray's resolution refers to President Huerta as "a scurrying imbrueder." Huerta, the resolution recites, "has nullified the Constitution, destroyed all lawful authority and government and has committed upon the persons of the President (Madison) and his family, a black-handed murder, paralleled in all history only by the cruelty of the dark ages, with all its superstitious and dastardly deeds of rapine and murder."

"There remains in Mexico neither rights of government nor of belligerence," the resolution concludes.

MISSISSIPPI PRISONERS PERISH IN CAGE

Flames Start in Hay Stored Under the Sleeping Quarters on Oakley Farm.

JACKSON, MISS., July 22.—Thirty-five convicts, sleeping on the second floor of a wooden cage at the Oakley convict farm 20 miles southwest of Jackson, were burned to death early this morning.

All of the victims were negroes and their bodies were burned beyond recognition. This afternoon their charred bodies were hurried in the prison grave yard.

The fire started on the first floor at the stairway landing, cutting off the only avenue of escape. The structure was built ten years ago with lumber taken from the old penitentiary building at Jackson. It burned with astonishing rapidity.

The convict farm is not equipped with any form of fire protection. Two night watchmen are employed at the place, but neither saw the fire until the flames burst through the windows of the lower floor.

The screams of the dying prisoners could be heard for nearly two miles. Efforts to reach the building were made, but were unable to save any prisoners. The lower floor of the cage was used as a store building, containing hay, corn and molasses in storage. The hay drosses ignited the fire to spread with added rapidity.

The Oakley farm is in charge of Sergeant E. T. Byrd. The prison hospital also is located at that place, but the convicts who lost their lives were not members of the hospital guard, all of them being employed in the cotton fields. Several noted negro criminals were among those who lost their lives.

Coroner J. W. Deal, accompanied by a jury, went to Oakley this morning to hold an inquest and endeavor to ascertain the cause of the fire.

Origin of Fire Mystery. "I can't explain it," said Sergeant Byrd over the long distance telephone this morning. "As to the origin of the fire I haven't the slightest idea. It may have been a match carelessly dropped at the stairway. I can not believe it was of incendiary origin."

"There was never a chance to save any of the prisoners. The blaze was under good headway before anybody discovered it. When we reached the building it was to find that the fire originated around the stove stairway leading to the upper floor of the cage. All of the upper windows were covered with heavy iron bars and it was impossible for the convicts to fight their way out."

Flame Was Unseen. "We did everything in our power, but the night was useless. The building was drenched from the first and the prisoners tried to get out of the place, but were being roasted alive added to the demoralization of our forces. We have no sort of fire protection or fighting equipment here, and the buckets of water thrown by other prisoners on the building had no effect whatsoever."

The first news of the holocaust was received by Mrs. O. E. Beckard, secretary of the Missouri State Prison Board, in a telephone message from Mrs. Byrd, wife of the warden. Mrs. Byrd was almost hysterical and could give but few of the details. A list of later communications was secured with Sergeant Byrd and a number of the prisoners were in the city.

Under prison rules, all convicts must be in their cells and sleeping by a clock. The prisoners had been sleeping several hours when they were awakened by the falling of sparks and shouts of smoke that poured up from below.
